The Cuban Economy: A Statistical Review

Summary

This Reference Aid on the Cuban economy provides a wide range of statistics of general interest on:

- Agricultural and industrial output.
- Transportation.
- Distribution.
- The value, direction, and composition of foreign trade.
- Hard currency current account balance, debt, and reserves.
- Soviet economic assistance.
- Population and labor force.

The coverage focuses on the period of 1970-82; where available, data for 1983 have also been included. Most tables also include comparative data for 1957 (the peak prerevolution year) and 1965 (an arbitrary benchmark for the first decade of the revolution).

The statistics on Cuba were obtained mainly from official Cuban publications, supplemented with a small amount of data from non-Cuban sources. Experts consider Cuba's foreign trade data to be fairly accurate, and checks with partner country data, where available, support this view. Statistics on production, distribution, and growth are more questionable in view of Cuba's combination of an elementary statistical system, state control of data, ideological bias, and lack of a way for foreign observers to validate these data. For these reasons, and because Cuba's Marxist national accounting system differs significantly from Western measures, the GNP statistics in table 1 are from a study done by Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates.

The statistics on foreign trade and finance were converted from pesos to US dollars at official Cuban exchange rates. For this report, Albania has been grouped with the East European Communist countries. Yugoslavia has been placed in the non-Communist category because its economic relations with Cuba are conducted in hard currency at world prices—the same as non-Communist countries.

The estimates of Soviet economic assistance are based on Soviet subsidies for Cuban sugar and nickel sales to Moscow and for Cuban petroleum purchases from the USSR; estimated Cuban drawings of Soviet project aid; and inferred settlements to cover Cuba's trade deficits with the USSR.

[a] Preliminary.
[b] Cuban trade with non-Communist countries is based on hard currency world prices, while most of its Communist-country trade uses soft currency negotiated prices that are frequently subsidized in Cuba's favor and do not reflect real market values. The result is a more favorable global trade balance than if Cuba conducted all of its trade at world-market prices.
